After the exhibitor and organisers are in agreement on the location of the stand, the exhibitor cannot complain about the location. The organisers make the final decision regarding the allocation of space. The organisers can reject applications without specific reasons.

3. It is not allowed to reserve a place for others. Only companies which are registered are allowed to take part in the exhibition.
4. Space only is stands which are built by the exhibitors themselves. The area will normally be available with 4 open sides and will often be in a free area together with other exhibitors, who have also chosen open stands. Conditions which the organisers have no control over, such as power failure, water failure, problems with heat, telephone and data lines, etc., as well as events which come under force majeure, do not give the exhibitors the right to demand compensation, or the right to be reimbursed for the stand rental or registration fee.
13. The organisers are responsible for security arrangements from when it's possible to start setting up stands until they have been dismantled again, but the organisers do not take any responsibility for the exhibited products, equipment or property of a third part. The exhibitor himself is responsible for arranging the necessary insurance.
14. The exhibitor is responsible for all transport, mounting, dismantling and protection of own goods and decorations.

19. If the stand is not dismantled before the required time, the organisers may do this work and send the exhibitor a bill.
20. All registrations are bound according to the legislation, which Atlantic Fair Spf. operates, regardless of any disclaimers made. The manager of Atlantic Fair Spf. makes the final decision if there any doubts about how the rules should be interpreted.
